To whom it may concern,

Please let me introduce you to Mr. Don King.

From 1993 to 1995, Don organized and directed crisis simulations for the Police Technology Program at John Abbott College. During these years, Don ensured that student actors would be available on a weekly basis for acting out crisis scenes such as conjugal violence and sexual assault.

This task involved many last minute calls and briefings on his part. During these years, Don was always able to get the right actors to the right location at the right time.

On occasion, Don assumed the lead role in a simulation and presented a formidable challenge to young police technology students. Don was able to create stress when it was required and this is natural for him as he pays attention to detail and "reads" people very well. I believe his movement training in theater has helped him in this area.

On a social level, I've always enjoyed sharing views on human behavior and life in general with Don. I am looking forward to a visit from Don sometime in the future and in the meantime, trust that he can assist you in any capacity.

If you require additional information, please contact me at John Abbott College or at home.

Thank you,

Joe Sledge
